STILL "GUILTY" OF DEICIDE?

Vatican Bows To U.A.R.

Cardinal Bea On Mission

DECLARATION AGAINST ANTISEMITISM NOT READY

By our Diplomatic Correspondent

The Vatican has had second thoughts about the proposed "declaration on the Jews" exonerating the Jewish people from guilt in the crucifixion of Christ. And the reason is not so much that the Roman Catholic Church wishes to cling to any belief in collective Jewish guilt as that it does not wish to appear to be siding with the Jews against the Arabs.

The declaration, which until now has held out so much promise for the ending of artificial hatreds between simple Christians and Jews, comes up for consideration at the September session of the Ecumenical Council. And, judging from an official Vatican statement published in June 13 in Rome, the declaration will be considerably watered down at that time.

The bulletin of the press service of the Vatican newspaper, l'Osservatore Romano, carried the following statement:

"With respect to certain information published in the press concerning the project of a declaration 'on the Jews', the Secretariat for Christian Unity specifies that the said text is still under study and that therefore has not been sent to the Council Fathers. If modifications should have to be made, these would have the purpose of harmonizing the terms of it with all of the whole of the doctrinal schemata of the Council".

The 2,300 prelates who will convene in September, will be unlikely to restore the wording of the original document, so radically favourable to the Jews, according to The New York Times, which a few days earlier published unofficial word to the effect that the watering down was in the offing.

Two days previous to the official Vatican statement, a JCNS despatch from Rome said that Arab diplomats had met Church leaders, including the Pope, and quoted a reliable Vatican source as saying that the Egyptian Ambassador to the Vatican spoke unofficially to Cardinal Augustine Bea, head of the Secretariat for the Promotion of Christian Unity, about the matter before the Cardinal's departure for Boston.

The Egyptian ambassador is reported to have warned the Cardinal of the strong opposition of the Arabs to the document in its original form. Cardinal Bea, a German Jesuit, directed the drafting of the original declaration, which contained a clear-cut statement that the Jews as a people bore no collective responsibility for the Crucifixion of Jesus — the statement that has now been eliminated and which would have meant far more than a routine condemnation of anti-Semitism by the Roman Catholic Church.

NEW FRENCH TANK FOR ISRAEL

PARIS, (JCNS) — During his visit to France at the end of the month, Mr. Levi Eshkol, the Israeli Prime Minister, is likely to be informed that France is willing, and even interested, to supply Israel with the new French powerful AMX-30 tank which costs $890,000, the JCNS correspondent here reliably learns.

Mr. Shimon Peres, the Israeli Deputy Defence Minister, who is expected to arrive here this week-end after accompanying Mr. Eshkol on his visit to the United States, will be busy putting the final touches to the preparations for the Israeli Premier's trip.

The programme for the visit will be officially announced this week, but it was learned that Mr. Eshkol will be entertained at lunch by the French Prime Minister, M. Georges Pompidou, on June 29. In the afternoon he will have separate talks with President de Gaulle at the Elysee Palace and later will meet M. Couve de Murville, the Foreign Minister, at the Quai d'Orsay.

Mr. Eshkol will also have talks with the French Minister of Defence, M. Pierre Mesmer. as well as with M. Raymond Triboulet, the Minister for Co-operation, in charge of aid to Africa.

On July 1, he will address a luncheon given in his honour by the French diplomatic press and the Foreign Press Association. The same evening he will attend a dinner given by the Israeli Ambassador to France, Mr. Walter Eytan, in honour of French Cabinet Ministers and other personalities. After the dinner, a garden party will take place at which a great many members of France's political, artistic and business worlds will be presented to Mr. and Mrs. Eshkol.

For the next three days Mr. Eshkol will tour French industrial, agricultural and military installations outside Paris. Then and for about a week after July 8, Mr. and Mrs. Eshkol will probably go to the French Riviera for a rest before returning to Israel.

TO CONFER WITH ISRAELI PRIME MINISTER LEVI ESHKOL: French President Charles de Gaulle.

TORONTO POLICE & HATEMONGERS

WHY NO ARRESTS TO DATE?

By L. D. ABRAHAMS, CJN Staff Writer

Are the Toronto police really interested in giving the hatemongers no peace? Maybe they are; but it's hard to tell.

If they are, why did Det. Sergeant Stuart Kennedy, of Metro's police intelligence squad, discourage Peter Sypnowich, a staff writer for the "Canadian Weekly", who had infiltrated the ranks of Toronto's hatemongers as a spy, and was ferreting out valuable factual information about them? Why did he not encourage him to continue with such valuable work?

Obviously, Kennedy was carrying out instructions from higher up, probably the Toronto Police Commission. And perhaps there were good reasons. But on the surface it looks discouraging.

Why, after Sypnowich had succeeded in capturing the interest of Magistrate C. O. Bick, chairman of the Metro Toronto Police Commission, in his undercover work, did Kennedy turn round and phone Sypnowich to warn him that, in the event of any arrests being carried out among the hatemongers, he would be liable to arrest along with them? This may be the law, but instructing Sypnowich in it at a time when Sypnowich was conscientiously trying to be of assistance seems to denote singular unconcern on the part of the police.

Why, in other words, was Sypnowich warned, in effect, to jump clear of his hatemonger companions in case of being arrested when, in fact, no arrests followed after he immediately and promptly complied with the warning?

These questions, and several more, remain to be answered following publication in last weekend's "Canadian Weekly" (a magazine supplied as a supplement to the Toronto Daily Star) of an eye-opening expose of life among Toronto's hatemongers by Peter Sypnowich.

The article, for the most part coldly factual and thoroughly substantiated, is entitled "My Weird Weekend with the Hatemongers". It should be read by every Canadian citizen interested in preserving democracy and protecting human dignity against hate-crazed lunatics. However, by The Canadian Jewish News's press time last Monday, neither Magistrate Bick nor Det. Sergeant Kennedy, both of whom were named in the Sypnowich article, had yet read it.

Detective Sergeant Kennedy declined to comment to CJN on the article until he had read it, and CJN was unable to contact Magistrate Bick directly despite repeated efforts. It is presumed that both officials will have read it by next issue's press time and that their comments, which may help clear up some of the above questions, will be available for presentation to CJN readers then.

Meantime, two facts alone, among the generous quantity bared by Sypnowich, would seem to have called for immediate police follow-up:

● FACT No. 1: The admission made to Sypnowich by one of the hatemongers, William John Beattie (described by Sypnowich as "a skinny young clerk whose Toronto apartment has been the main base for leaflet distribution") that he had smashed a plate glass window on Queen Street.

● FACT No. 2: Sypnowich's statement that, on leaving the lodgings he shared with Beattie, he noticed an army M4 survival rifle, serial No. 179 in one of Beattie's drawers.

It would seem that on the strength of these two facts alone, Beattie would at least deserve a visit from the police, even if there were no hatemongering involved. And how much more so, then, in view of official pledges and promises to go after the hatemongers with everything in the book. Maybe the police did, in fact, pay Beattie a visit but were unable to pin anything on him. But in any case, now Sypnowich has alleged, in public print, that Beattie boasted of having broken the plate glass window, which must be taken as new evidence, possibly justifying another police visit.

All in all, the information supplied by Sypnowich in the article leaves little doubt that all members of

CANADIAN COMPANY TO PROSPECT FOR OIL

JERUSALEM, (JCNS). — A Canadian petroleum company, Petrocana, has been licensed by the Israeli Government to prospect for oil off the coast.

The licence permits the firm to conduct a week-long seismological survey of the sea-bed off the coast with the assistance of the Israeli Navy.

AGUDAT ISRAEL OPPOSES PROTESTS AGAINST RUSSIA

Jerusalem (CJN). — The World Agudat Israel will discuss in closed session the problem of Soviet Jewry when its 11th International Congress (Knessia Gdola) assembles on July 20th in this city.

According to a spokesman for this world organization of Orthodox Jewry, Agudat Israel does not condone any protest meetings against the Soviet government which involve Jewish groups in political problems connected with the cold war. On the contrary, it believes in strong, determined — but diplomatic — action in order to relieve the situation of religious Jews in the Soviet Union.

Hundreds of delegates from various countries including Canada will attend.

Presidential Term Limited

Jerusalem, (JCNS) — The Knesset decided by 35 votes to 17 to limit the office of President of the state to two consecutive terms of five years each.

At the same time the House defeated all Opposition bids to grant the President wider powers.

Israel's Nuclear Progress

GIANT PLANT IN HAIFA

Haifa, (JCNS) — The first operations are already under way for building the Technion's planned multi million nuclear department on Mount Carmel. The new centre will house a small nuclear reactor, a reactor physics laboratory, a nuclear engineering laboratory, other laboratories and a considerable variety of nuclear instrumentation.

Meanwhile, the Technion's nuclear science department is engaged on 22 research projects and expects to play an important part in the combined desalination project first suggested by President Johnson in February and confirmed now during the visit to America of the Israeli Premier Levi Eshkol.

It is expected that the Israeli Atomic Energy Commission, once it has signed the research agreement for the nuclear desalination of seawater project with its United States counterpart, will channel the major part of Israel's research programme on the project to the Technion.

The only Israeli-born member of the nuclear science department is its head, Professor Shimon Yiftah. Its other staff members come from Britain, the U.S A., Germany, Holland and Hungary.

A member of the department, Dr. Aviva Gileadi, one of the few women nuclear physicists in the world, is now in Puerto Rico, helping to "start up" a nuclear power reactor operated by the United States Atomic Engergy Commission.

At the moment, 20 graduates are taking nuclear science department courses leading to a Master of Science or Doctor of Science degrees. More than 1,200 undergraduates are taking courses run by the department in physics and mechanical, electrical and chemical engineering, and civil engineering and chemistry courses are planned.

NO RELIGIOUS LIBERTY IN SPAIN

Madrid, (JCNS) — Contrary to reports as early as February, the Vatican has not yet ratified a decision by the Metropolitan Council of Spain, granting full religious liberty to non-Catholic groups and leading to the removal of discrimination against them. This would be of particular importance to the Spanish Jews and Protestants.

The council, made up of Spain's most important archbishops and bishops, is fiercely divided over the current tendency towards greater religious tolerance. Die-hard bishops on the Metropolitan Council, and others in the Spanish Church regard with strong disfavour some of the "progressive" decisions taken by the Ecumenical Council.

They do no more than pay lip service to them, while at the same time opposing their implementation because "such tendencies will sully the pure flame of Spanish Catholicism".

BRITISH FIRMS DEFY BOYCOTT

London, (JCNS) — All the firms handling Jaffa citrus in Britain have received letters from the Arab Boycott Office in Qatar requesting them to cease trading with Israel and to resign from the Anglo-Israel Chamber of Commerce.

The firms, which include Agrexco and Sims, have all refused to comply with the request.

Similar letters have been received by French and German firms handling Jaffa fruit, and their response has been the same.

Ben-Zur (London) Ltd., an insurance brokers company, has been informed by the Board of Trade that its name has been added to the boycott list.

70,000 NAZI CRIMINALS AT LARGE

Haifa, (JCNS) — The West German Government has a list of 70,000 former S.S. men, only a few hundred of whom have been brought to trial, according to Mr. Tuvia Friedmann, Director of the Haifa Documentation Centre. He said that he had appealed to the West German Minister of Justice about the matter.

The Documentation Centre is to appeal to all concentration camp survivors living in Israel to come forward and give evidence against Nazis in an effort to force the West Germans to start proceedings against them. Mr. Friedmann said that thousands of war criminals were living in West Germany under false names, waiting to come out into the open when the statute of limitations comes into force next year.

NEW RABBI FOR SURINAM

Amsterdam, The Netherlands, (JCNS). — The new minister of the Jewish community of Paramaribo, in Surinam (formerly Dutch Guiana), the Rev. Moshe Amine, arrived there at the end of last month. Two Roman Catholic priests attended when he preached his inaugural sermon. The Governor of Surinam was also present.

Surinam is the oldest permanent Jewish settlement in the Western Hemisphere, having been established in 1639 by Sephardi Jews from Spain and Holland. It numbers about 35 Jewish families today.

By M. J. Nurenberger

TO FELLOW ZIONISTS

In the international language, the term Zionist has been almost as much abused in recent years as the term American. Every Arab demagogue, every Arab dictator, anyone who lacks an argument to defend a weak case, yells — Zionism.

It used to be The Jew. But now, as Ben Bella last month told a reporter of the Tunisian magazine, Jeune Afrique, he has no quarrel with the Jews; his is a political conflict with Zionism.

In our internal debates on the merits of the Zionist Movement and in our demands upon this respectable organization which gave birth to the greatest revolution in modern Jewish history, sometimes we are influenced by demagoguery. Still, a Zionist is the most honorable name in our lexicon, in the Jewish dictionary of our time. It depicts one who dared swim for decades mid-stream, telling Jews the truth even when it hurt — before everyone jumped on the bandwagon of the reborn Jewish state.

The blue-white flag of the State of Israel came into being at the Zionist Congress. Herzl understood its importance and Jabotinsky always underlined the greatness of a banner which a people-to-be, gathered from all corners of the earth, must be able to follow.

An army needs a flag. And the Zionist Movement raised this flag which today so proudly defies the waves of hatred and cold war on the Eastern shores of the Mediterranean.

When our Ontario Zionists meet this weekend for their 26th convention, they should remember that they are the Sons of the Jewish Revolution. There will be — there must be — self-criticism, an examination of the Zionist conscience. Such a review of the glorious past, coupled with a realistic approach to the problems of today, certainly will inspire the delegates, giving a pertinent answer to those who ask: why a Zionist organization today?

I still venture to say that condensing the agenda to the two paramount issues facing the Zionists in this country and elsewhere — that of fighting the Arab boycott courageously and organizing an Aliyah movement — will impress upon the Jewish world that the Zionist Movement still has a great task to fulfill; that those who helped on the battlefield for the establishment of the Jewish State are the ones who have remained the loyal vanguard of the fight for Zion in the Diaspora.

Israeli Economy Booming

London, (JCNS) — Three reports available this week comment favourably on the expansion and drive of the Israel economy.

Bank Hapoalim comments on the improved balance of trade in 1963. Imports of goods rose by some 5½ per cent, and whereas consumption and capital goods, oil and raw materials were on the increase, the import of ships and aircraft was on the decline.

Mr. Walter N. Williams, chairman of "Palestine-British Bank," says:

"Trade and commerce are growing rapidly in the State of Israel and development in industry continues at a dynamic pace".

Through its subsidiaries, Palestine-British Bank Investment Corporation and Palestine British Nominees Company, the bank is participating in the formation of one of Israel's largest investment and developments corporations to be known as Israel British Trust and which will have total initial assets of over 1£70 million in real estate, industry and commerce, particularly in concerns connected with exports.

Sir Henry d'Avigdor Goldsmid, chairman of "Anglo-Israel Securities", in his annual review, says: "The Israel economy has continued to progress with a rise of over 10 per cent in production and an accumulation of foreign currency balances of more than 80 million dollars in 1963". The Israel economy, he adds, is "growing faster than that of any Western nation."

The value of the company's investments at the end of March was £1,239,288 sterling. The company is now fully invested in Israeli stocks.

"The world", Sir Henry says, "will continue to be attracted by the dynamic development of the State of Israel and the determination of its people to make a success of their lives."

IMMIGRANTS FORM B. B. LODGE

A small group of immigrants, refugees from Hitler's holocaust, arrived in Toronto in 1948. They formed the Hebrew Youth Club and held social affairs from which proceeds were allocated to the School of Retarded Children on Beverly Street and the AKIM of Jerusalem.

With twenty-seven members in 1955, membership grew to the present number of sixty-five, culminating in the formation of a new lodge of B'nai B'rith, the Yorkdale, after a series of discussions with the Anti-Defamation League.

Officers of this new lodge are: George Weiss, president; Joseph Figa, 1st vice president; Sam Smiley, 2nd vice president; Mickey Zworth, 3rd vice president; Howard Chandler, recording secretary; Julius Weiss, treasurer; Larry Wise, chaplain; Carl Newton, warden; Henry Kanarek, guardian; Lui Freedman, Sam Salcman, Sam Pacht, Alexander Schomberger, Max Rosenbloom, Sid Sugar.

Chevalier Sings Appeal

STOCKHOLM, (JCNS) — Maurice Chevalier, many Swedish actors and actresses and the Chairman of the Stockholm Board of Deputies, Dr. Bernhard Tarschys, are among the signatories of an appeal in the Swedish press for funds to plant a memorial wood in Israel to be named after Karl Gerhard, who died here, aged 73, a short time ago.

Author, actor, singer and theatrical producer, Karl Gerhard was a staunch anti-Nazi and a supporter of Israel.

GENERAL ATTACKS ZIONISTS

BUENOS AIRES, (JCNS) — General Gilberto Hidalgo Oliva, of the Argentine Army, attacked anti-Nazi propaganda in which, he said, the Jews are engaged, at a conference in the extreme Right-wing clog, "Del Progreso", here.

The general said that the Jewish community in Argentina and all over the world had embarked on this propaganda in order to impose Zionist policy.

The Jews also sought to promote by these means cultural, educational and social activities, "which were not to the benefit of the country," he added.

Rabbis To Hold Conference

World-famous Rabbi, scholar and author, Dr. SAMUEL ROSENBLATT, son of the late Cantor "Yossele" Rosenblatt, will be in Toronto on Tuesday, June 23rd, to address Toronto's CONFERENCE OF RABBIS AND SYNAGOGUE LEADERS at the Shaarei Tefillah Congregation.

The Conference will take the form of a Dinner tendered by Bert Godfrey, General Campaign Chairman, and Meyer W. Gasner, National Synagogue Council Chairman, on behalf of the annual High Holy Day Program for State of Israel Bonds of Toronto.

For the first time in more than half a century, the High Holy Days will be observed this year at the beginning of September, which makes it vital that early and intensive planning be undertaken in all Toronto Congregations to ensure the success of the traditional High Holy Day Appeal for Israel Bonds. The Synagogue efforts takes on added special significance this year, because in Canada, this is the first year of REDEMPTION of Israel Bonds, confirming the faith in Israel of those who purchased these Bonds ten years ago.

Dr. SAMUEL ROSENBLATT, spiritual leader of Beth Tfiloh Congregation of Baltimore, and Vice-Chairman of the National Congregational and High Holy Day Committee of the Israel Bond Organization, will bring to the June 23rd Conference, a message of particular interest and importance for Toronto Rabbis and Synagogue leaders.

Widely known as a lecturer in the United States, Canada, Latin America, North Africa, Europe and Israel, Dr. Rosenblatt, has served also as a lecturer in Semitic languages at Columbia University, and a faculty member of the Oriental Seminary of Johns Hopkins University since 1928. He is a Past President of the Mizrachi Organization of Baltimore.

The author of numerous books, among them, "Hear, O Israel," "Yossele Rosenblatt", "The History of the Mizrachi Movement", and "The Books of Beliefs and Opinions of Saadia Gaon", Dr. Rosenblatt has devoted his life and work to furthering the cause of Judaism

ESHKOL'S TALKS WITH RABBI SOLOVEITCHIK

New York, (JCNS) — The religious and secular relationship in Israel was not discussed when Rabbi Dr. Joseph Soloveitchik, the spiritual leader of America's Orthodox community, met Levi Eshkol, the Israeli Prime Minister, last week.

Mr. Eshkol invited Rabbi Soloveitchik to meet him after he arrived in New York from his talks with President Johnson and Government leaders in Washington.

Rabbi Soloveitchik, who is Professor of Talmud and Religious Philosophy at Yeshiva University, told the JCNS correspondent that the discussions with Mr. Eshkol on a variety of problems lasted an hour. Only the Prime Minister could comment, he added.

Mr. Eshkol invited Rabbi Soloveitchik to visit Israel. Some weeks ago the rabbi had told the JCNS that he felt able to go now that the Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi had been elected.

The rabbi had been asked to accept the post several times, but he had said that one of his reasons for declining was that he would have been "an officer of the State. A rabbinate linked with the State was not completely free."

PROGRESS NOTED

TORONTO'S JEWISH LIBRARY

The recent report by Bert Godfrey, president of Toronto's Jewish Public Library, is impressive indeed. According to the figures, approximately 14,000 books were made available last year to innumerable readers seeking information on Jews and Judaism.

For all of us absorbed in our daily activities, it is difficult to realize the incessant labor of a modest scholar, Dr. Israel Frankel, a tri-lingual director, ideal for this tri-lingual library which shelters a treasure of volumes in Yiddish, English and Hebrew on Judaica and cognate fields.

The Jewish community of Toronto may well be proud of this growing cultural institution.

A $64,000 QUESTION

THE POLICE AND BIGOTS

The more one reads, the more one hears and the more declarations one is exposed to regarding the movement against the hatemongers in Toronto — the less one understands what is being done to counteract this epidemic, and by whom.

Everyone seems to be studying the problem. However, as Mark Twain said about the weather, everyone talks about it but very little seems to be effectuated.

We still wonder why no action has been taken against those who last year smeared swastikas upon houses of worship and the disseminators of hate literature.

We can only assume that the police do not know the identity of the criminals. Otherwise, we feel sure, they would have taken steps to assure the public of its vigilance and its desire to prosecute the guilty.

NEGOTIATIONS IN ORDER

HEBREW TEACHERS AND THE COMMUNITY

There definitely is a discrepancy between the living standard of the average family in our affluent society and our teachers. Especially is this difference noticeable when one compares the salary of a Hebrew teacher who carries the responsibility of molding the future Jewish generation to the income of the so-called Jewish civil servant.

The demands formulated by Toronto's Hebrew teachers, as published in The Canadian Jewish News last week, for an adjustment of their salaries should certainly be considered seriously by those responsible for the operation of our Jewish schools.

We understand that the Hebrew teachers are very reasonable in their claims. They also realize the burden carried by the Jewish community where taxation is voluntary.

So long as the Jewish schools are not subsidized in their general curriculum by the government, those operating these educational institutions continuously will face financial problems.

It seems to us that, with good will on both sides, negotiations should continue so that the profession of the Hebrew teacher receive the recognition it deserves.

KHRUSCHEV: Yes. I understand Hebrew. Eshkol means a bunch of grapes, but this bunch is very sour . . .

letters to the editor

A SIN OF OMISSION

Dear Editor:

I should like to bring to your attention a few inaccuracies in the May 15th, Special Ottawa Supplement, issue of The Canadian Jewish News.

In this supplement you stated that Mr. Ben Gurion was received by Mr. Bertram Loeb. Mr. Ben Gurion actually was escorted by Mr. Alex Betcherman who, at that time, was the president of the Jewish Community Council.

Furthermore, I feel that there was not sufficient mention made of the role that Mr. Betcherman has played in the leadership and molding of The Ottawa Jewish community. As a Zionist leader, as president of the largest Orthodox synagogue in Canada, he is one who really has helped mold the Ottawa Vaad Hair into the position of prominence that it now has.

Neither was there any mention made of the late O. C. Caplan, one of the founding fathers of the Vaad, the late Simon Ritt who was a co-founder of the Jewish Community Center. I hope that in some future issue you will give recognition to these individuals.

The fact that I could make a modest success of my presidency of the Vaad is certainly because of the dedication and devotion of all those who made the Vaad possible in years gone by.

Ottawa — HYMAN BESSIN

MAX BROD AND PRAGUE

Dear Editor:

The article about Max Brod's home country which appeared in The Canadian Jewish News, issue of June 12th, upon the occasion of his eightieth birthday doesn't bear the name of the author. It is just as well, for it wouldn't earn him any honors, at least not on the part of those who, from their own experience, know the conditions which prevailed in Bohemia and its capital before the First World War.

To call the Austrian province of Bohemia of that time a peasant country constitutes a gross misconception. As a matter of fact, Bohemia was the most industrialized and progressive province of the entire monarchy. Of course, Prague was the center of all three cultures—Czech, German and Jewish—, closely interwoven each with the other.

Prague was neither a ghetto nor an enclave of Jewish culture; it was only its center. What's more, this Jewish culture was by no means restricted to the German speaking sector of the population. A list of Czech writers, scientists and artists would be quite long.

A factor of paramount significance for Czech culture, literature and notably music is the fact that Jewish authors writing in German helped the Czech writers and artists to pave their way from their provincial confinement to the world scene. The writer of the first order to be credited for this share to Czech culture is Max Brod.

duty of our generation

U.S. Secretary of State

The War Against Hatred

No one can hold for a time the seals of office entrusted to me without brooding about the survival of man. For man at his best clings precariously to splendid heights of almost miraculous achievement while down below is the yawning chasm into which man at his worst can so quickly plunge. It is a problem no longer reserved for poet or philosopher; in the nuclear age it is an operational problem for the government of our present day.

I think I know what a part of the answer must be. We are compelled to think long and hard about what it means to be a human being, what common interest can be found to bind man to man. I find some wisdom in that typically American question, "Who do you think you are?" Let us stand back and answer it quietly in our own hearts: lonely people, naked before our God, frail and trembling in an awesome and often hostile universe, needing to stretch out our hands to fellow men for comfort and help and protection. How trivial our differences compared to our elemental humanity!

Among these common interests are what we have come to call human rights. They are nothing new — the yearning is as old as human history. There is no monopoly — they have taken root wherever man has lived. We ourselves have nourished them out of a Judeo-Christian and Greek inheritance, but we have not been the only ones to impose moral restraint upon raw power. We in the West have struggled to transform the notion that "The King can do no wrong" into the notion that "If it is wrong, the King must not do it." Step by step liberties were won — in the common law, in parliaments, in constitutions, and in respect for human dignity.

One of the most compelling tasks before us today is to get on with the unfinished business of human rights. By doing so we clarify the meaning of this world struggle between freedom and coercion for those who are still confused. Even more important, we move mankind closer to the decent world order in which we believe — and the only kind in which we and all other men who value freedom can live in security.

As we all know, there is much to be done. Racial and religious and other prejudices are rife in many lands. In some new countries, and a few older ones, governments which parade the language of freedom and democracy are in fact one party or personal dictatorships. Behind the iron and bamboo curtains, basic political rights are almost non-existent and religious liberties are restriced, sometimes sharply. We welcome liberalizing trends in Eastern Europe, the Soviet Union and elsewhere, not primarily for strategic reasons, although they may help the world to move toward peace, but because they make life more dignified, decent and civilized for fellow inhabitants of the planet.

Recently representatives of Jewish organizations came to Washington to discuss with government officials, including myself, reports of a recrudescence of anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union. Harlan Cleveland recently reported on this situation in detail. I would add my assurance that American leaders at the highest levels are aware of the problems of Soviet Jewry and that Soviet leaders are aware of our concern. We shall continue to make known our interest in the welfare of religious, communities within the Soviet Union and elsewhere, because we consider human rights indivisible.

Meanwhile, in the United Nations, the United States continues to work for human rights. As you know, we took the initiative in generating support for a Declaration against all forms of religious intolerance. We were active also in developing a proposed international convention to eliminate all forms of racial discrimination. Our representative on the UN Commission on Human Rights, Mrs. Marietta Tree, was the sponsor of an article in that Convention to condemn and to eradicate anti-Semitism. We hope that the next session of the General Assembly will act on both the Declaration against religious intolerance and the Convention on racial discrimination.

Despite ugly prejudices and discriminations in many lands, and despite the lack of political liberties in so much of the world, I think we can look to the future of human right with good heart. For the simple notions out of which our nation was born — those notions of government with the consent of the governed, of equality, of civil liberties and religious freedom — are the most powerful ideas at work in the world today. Eventually they will dissolve the dictatorships which now make this world a dangerous place. For they represent the deepest aspirations of the human race.

SERMON FOR THE WEEK

MEASURING UP TO PROGRESS

The thought of men who have not yet mastered themselves mastering the universe is beginning to appal us. To send a space ship to the moon manned by humans who, from an ethical point of view, are still living in the cave, and who will leave behind them on earth poverty, squalor, and discrimination is a spectre which is beginning to haunt humanity. It underlines the fundamental crisis of our age. Our moral stature has not kept pace with our technological advances. In the sphere of the physical sciences humanity has made more rapid progress in the past fifty years than in the past five thousand years. In the sphere of interpersonal and intergroup relationships we are still, for the most part, living in pre-history.

The painful discrepancy between what we can do for the atom, on the one hand, and for the human heart, on the other, has tended to drive many of those for whom the lines have fallen, if not in pleasant places, at least in places where physical survival is no immediate, and hence all-preoccupying, problem, into the arms of negative philosophies of life. Caught between an advanced technology and a retarded morality, the age-old complaints against the Universe have been further underscored. On the one hand, we are encouraged to eat, drink and be merry in terms of a crude, superficial hedonism; and on the other hand, we are consoled by a pessimistic philosophy of alienation.

Yet the very enormity of our moral-technological paradox contains within itself the seeds of its own creative resolution. Prodigious moral efforts in a pre-modern era were doomed to failure due to a lack of technology. An iota of morality in the modern world backed by our new insights is a thousand times more effective. Those who organise our modern welfare services may be much inferior, morally speaking, to Isaiah who preached an advanced utopianism. Yet Isaiah would have been overwhelmed beyond his wildest utopian expectations had he been afforded the privilege of setting foot in a single modern hospital. By comparison with what we might be in terms of our technology, we are, morally speaking, dust and ashes. By comparison with the dreams of the greatest moralists of all ages, the prophets, we are at the very frontiers of Heaven.

Reinhold Niebuhr has written an important book called "Moral Man and Immoral Society". His thesis is that man as an individual will always behave in a more moral fashion than any collective. Yet the Torah denies this argument in the very concept of "a kingdom of priests and a holy nation." We have the promise of our tradition that God demands precisely that we, as a collective, and ultimately all collectives, be righteous, or moral, collectives. It is not that immoral society prevents moral man from achieving perfection. It is as much immoral man who prevents a potentially moral society from moving in that direction.

It is not less technology that we require to close the gap between our morality and our sciences, but more. Only when we utilise, in both our interpersonal and intergroup relations, the same kind of result yielding insights that have brought us so far in the sphere of the physical world, will man be released from his bondage to a primitive morality. We may pray that we might reach those goals, but we must also intelligently plan to achieve them.

A SHORT STORY

By GRACE HOLLANDER

He Wasn't Jewish

At first I wouldn't go. A Hitachdut dinner is like a family party at an old aunt's — a lot of relatives and half-relatives to whom one feels a certain belonging, a certain comfort in the common language, common experience, no need of effort or pretense. They know. They know the place I come from, they recognize my origin and I am what I am with them. I don't have to attempt to transmit myself and my past on the basis of analogy which fits, at best, like a masquerade. Even the East Side of London is not the same as the East Side of New York.

Going to a Hitachdut dinner is like going to visit an old flame. Its nice when a smoulder of the old ardor flares up but it happens so rarely anymore. I had married "Israel" and my old playmate, Zionism Umph!

Anyhow, I went. Family is family after all, and one still can flirt some times with an old flame.

I finally found a seat at a table marked, vegetarians. I didn't exactly relish the idea of having only a fruit-bowl and a plate of tomato and lettuce for dinner; but there wasn't another seat in the hall.

I looked at the people sitting opposite. Say what you like there's something Grant Woody about vegetarians.

"Do you think I can get the regular meal here, too?" I asked.

Their straight lips became straighter. My meat greed was obviously anathema to them.

"Oh yes, the waiter said it would be alright," a young voice came from beside me. Black eyebrow pencil marked the outlines of her eyes, heavy and oriental; bright lipstick covered her full mouth. There was no vegetarian aseticism here — more the spoiled darling of a television advertisement.

"Been here long?" I asked socially.

"Three weeks".

"Oh? Thinking of staying?"

"Never, I never thought of coming. It wasn't my idea."

"No? Whose then?"

"My father's. He sent me."

I tried to look beyond the mascara. I had heard of kids coming to Israel because:

"I ran away from home," or, "I graduated from high school," or, "All my life I saved for this," or, "My last fling before I settle down."

But had never heard of a father sending a young girl, against her will, alone, to Israel.

"Why? Wasn't he Jewish?" It was a stab in the dark.

"Worse than that?"

I looked at her again, she was really nice looking under all that makeup.

"Don't tell me you got yourself mixed up with a Negro!"

"How'd you guess?"

"How'd I guess? Innocence is fascinating, so unknowing, so ready in its complete unpreparedness for life. This pitzkele (little one) ready to take on the whole world. Love conquers all! Right out of Hollywood. What seasoned, worldly father can combat such innocent stupidity. I felt a twist of great sympathy for her father.

"My father was lucky; My boy friend got sick a week before the wedding. He had to be hospitalized and we canceled the whole thing."

"My father was lucky," she had said. A loaded word lucky, I thought. Some things shouldn't be left to luck.

....And so he shipped me off to Israel and I promised to give it a six-month-trial.

"What does he expect you to do here in six months, find yourself a Jewish Sir Launcelot." I couldn't help being sarcastic. I wanted to give her father a good talking to.

"Well, he figured if I do get mixed up with anyone here, at least he'll be Jewish. But they're all drips. Jim is feet tall, worked his way through college prize fighting and writes marvelous poetry. What have these pale skinny Israeli's got? Nothing! Just because they're Jewish...."

Mrs. Grace Hollander, resident of Israel, a former American, here begins a series of stories on North Americans in Israel. Hitachdut is is the club of Americans and Canadians in Israel.

AN ARREST IN BRAZIL

SAO PAULO, (JCNS) — Professor Mario Schemberg, Professor of Mathematics at Sao Paulo University, Brazil, a Jew, is included in the list published recently by the Brazilian authorities of people still detained for "subversive activities".

From Belo Horizonte, the capital of the rich province of Minas Gerais, the Opposition paper "Correio da Manha" reports that two Jewish professors are among those arrested for political reasons. They are Professor Simon Swartzman and Professor Marcos Rubinger.

The paper had accused the Chief of Police in Belo Horizonte of antisemitism in arresting the two men, but it transpires that he is himself of Jewish origin. His name is David Hassan.

city of contrasts

By SHEILA TURNER

CHICAGO JEWRY

The main characteristic of Chicago Jewry is diversity. North west of the city centre little boys brush peyot out of the way as they slug a baseball into the middle of a field.

Twenty miles further north young adults, two generations removed from Europe, will ask what a "yente" is.

Estimates of the number of Jews living in the city vary between 282,000 and 400,000. The lower figure is accepted by the American Jewish Year Book.

German Jews came to the city first, beginning in 1845. They were followed by immigrants from Eastern Europe, who started arriving in the 1890s.

The initial cleavage between the two immigration streams — separate neighbourhoods, hospital, religious schools and philanthropic activities - has taken two generations to blur. Until recently no child from the East European stream was admitted to the Germans' exclusive downtown social club.

The average Chicago Jew is not likely to think in terms of a Jewish community. Individuals are too scattered and their outlook too different for the community to be identified as a whole.

Two concentrations of Jews live South, in the intellectual Hyde Park area near the University of Chicago, and in a complacently middleclass sector a few miles farther out from the city centre.

The majority live north of the central downtown area. Orthodox remnants of the old West Side and many of the refugees of the Second World War have settled in a neighbourhood of modest apartment buildings at Albany Park.

A little to the north live the bulk of the Jews in a post-war community of comfortable homes and new apartment buildings.

Beyond this area are the prosperous suburbs on the shores of Lake Michigan. Some are still closed to Jews. But Jews make up more than one-third of the inhabitants in two sectors and more than half in the large suburb of Skokie.

Since the end of the Second World War, the Jews have been moving away from the centre of the city. Those with their origins in eastern Europe have left the West Side to the Negroes.

Many of those of German-Jewish stock have abondoned the old neighbourhoods on the South Side for the green lawns of the northern suburbs. Of late, however, there appears to be a movement back to new sites near downtown along the elevated Lake Shore Drive.

There are nearly 150 synagogues. While membership appears to be growing, religious commitment appears to be diminishing. It is considered remarkable that a suburban rabbi has convinced a number of young mothers to return to the kashrut their mothers had abandoned.

Jewish organisations are numbered in hundreds with all the main causes represented. In terms of money raised, the Jewish Federation and the Israel Bonds Organisations are the giants.

The federation supports two large general hospital and a physical rehabilitation centre. Under its wing also there are vocational advice and family counselling services, a Jewish community centre, a home for emotionally disturbed children and three homes for old people.

An intensive campaign for funds brings in $6 million dollars every year, two-thirds of which goes to the United Jewish Appeal. More Israel Bonds are sold to individuals than any other kind.

With a membership of several thousands, B'nai B'rith is probably the organisation with the largest support locally. Professional clubs range from a Decalogue Society for lawyers to a Shomrim Society for Jewish policemen.

Four community centres serve the area. An attempt is made to inject Jewish content into their programmes, but bridge lessons and athletic facilities appear to attract the most support.

The issues in which the community shows the most concern are indicated in readers' letters to the "Chicago Sentinel", the Jewish weekly.

Some stress the paucity of good leadership. Questions are being asked about who will support philanthropic and religious causes when this generations has gone, and how bright, morally strong young men can be encouraged to enter the rabbinate?

There are pleas for the support of the College of Jewish Studies, the five-day schools, and the two largest yeshivot for the training of Orthodox rabbis to counter shallow religious practice and training.

In one letter a woman urged more Jewish girls to take up hospital work to attract some of the Jewish doctors who might otherwise marry non-Jewish nurses.

Letters are occasionally published complaining of discrimination in housing or employment, but the Atni-Defamation League reports improvement every year.

The possibility of racially integrated suburbs is a frequent topic of debate and of correspondence. The philosophical question of the social responsibility of Jews towards the Negroes is also a favourite subject.

- KEEP SMILING -

WHO'S A PIG?

Mr. David Gibson-Watt, British M.P. for the town of Hereford and chairman of the Livestock Export Council, recently has returned from the successful British Agricultural Exhibition in Moscow. He says he had an amusing time conducting Mr. Khrushchev around.

When he suggested that eleven little black pigs, born there, were Russian, Mr. Khrushchev smiled and said: "No. They speak English."

STILL THE SAME, BY ANY OTHER NAME

Lunching at an Israeli hotel the other day, a conversation was overheard between a tourist and a young waiter in which the lines of communication seemed hopelessly tangled.

"Bring me some stewed fruit," said the tourist. The waiter brought a portion of canned pineapple.

"I don't like pineapple," said the tourist. "But, madame, said the waiter politely, "this is not pineapple, it is ananas."

"Don't try and teach me, young man, "this is pineapple."

A nearby diner tried to be helpful. He explained that pineapple is known locally by its continental name of ananas.

"Whoever heard of such a thing," said the tourist, and added: "Well, of course your waiters go to college to learn the job and I only finished grade school."

HOUSEHOLD WORD?

An American tourist, complete with jockey-type cap and cameras slung all over him, got into a conversation with the Knesset (Parliament) guard. Whatever it may have been that they argued over, the tourist finally asked pathetically, "You mean you've never heard of Israel Bonds??"

THE ONE UNBREAKABLE HABIT

by Ruthie

There's an old saying: We eat to live, not live to eat. And this is impressed upon us every day of our lives. Physically we've got to be in top form in order to cope with the problems of our jet age.

But for me, you, you and you — for all of us, it's a pain in the neck.

I don't know, when Mama made a meal, she didn't count calories, she didn't look for special vitamins. Instinctively she knew that a main dish should be accompanied with green vegetables, and that was followed by a compote. Tea and cake satisfied our sweet tooth. On the hottest day she insisted we have a bowl of steaming chicken soup.

"It's good for you — brings out the perspiration and makes you feel cool."

And we had to listen. Arguing with Mama was like fighting City Hall; you couldn't win.

Sometimes she served cold borsht or schav, to balance the temperature maybe. Any health properties it contained was purely accidental.

If Papa had heartburn, he took bicarb, and no one gave it another thought.

Sure, people died. But, in case you don't know it, they're dying now too despite our radical change in dietary habits as prescribed by health authorities.

Remember the news item, some time ago, saying that a family someplace in the States died because they ate lox for breakfast one Sunday morning? The stuff was contaminated.

So since then that particular meikhel (dish) is verboten in our house. (By the way, I think I'm a hypochondriac.)

Also, do you recall the time a year ago Passover when Pessakhdicka (Passover) canned sardines were discovered to be unfit for consumption?

Naturally, you don't repeat the same mistake (some mistake) twice. So this Pessakh I bought a few tins. And, you know what? They lay on the shelf for nearly a month before I dared look at them. Finally I threw them out. I just couldn't use them.

What can you do, for instance, about eggs? My family loves them in any form. And, even if you don't serve them at a meal, they're an important ingredient in almost any recipe.

Nu, all of a sudden the public is scared — eggs contain a high count of cholesterol, which eventually clogs our arteries and that leads to our number one killer: a heart attack.

How about a simple dessert like stewed prunes? I cook them without sugar. I serve them because of their digestive properties and calcium.

So what happens? Moomeh (auntie) Menookha, who's visiting us, can't eat them. She's, nisht far untz gezugt (not wishing it on us), diabetic; prunes contain a naturally high percentage of sugar.

Go know!

My kids have more cavities than teeth. When I see the dentist, he's furious with me.

"You should know better than to let them eat candy and suck lollypops!"

"But, Doctor," in self defense, "I don't allow that. Instead I ply them with dates, figs, raisins. They're sweet and, besides(they contain calcium and phosphorous."

"Raisins? Figs? You're crazy. The sugar in them eats their teeth!"

So — that's out.

We love barley, beans, potatoes. What kind of tahm (taste) has any meat without a helping of that? Nu — carbohydrates, starch. Who wants to be fat?

Water is good for the kidneys. But after two glasses, I feel the food floating in my stomach.

I have to go out of my way to buy saltless cheese for my cousin Bella. She can't eat any other kind.

Did you ever taste saltless cheese? After one mouthful, you've lost your appetite forever.

Why do we have to eat, anyway?

TORONTO EITZ CHAIM FAREWELL TO GRADS

Graduates of Eitz Chaim Day Schools were tendered a farewell breakfast reception last Sunday, June 14th. by the Mothers' Association and the Fathers' Association of the school in the auditorium.

Mrs. H. Magder extended greetings from the Mothers' Association; Mrs. J. Silver, newly elected president, was introduced by Mrs. J. Blitz.

Every graduate received a gift during a presentation ceremony conducted by Mr. Harry P. Botnick, chairman of the board of Eitz Chaim.

the lively arts • By D. COHN

• Enrico Macias, one of France's most successful young popular singers, has been banned from entering Algeria, his native country, and the Lebanon.

The Algerian government based its refusal on the grounds that Macias' songs "speak too much of Algeria — though they speak of her with love only...."

Lebanese authorities were franker. Several months ago Macias visited Beirut and had the most spectacular success of his short but brilliant career. Last week, however, he was informed by the Lebanese Consulate in Paris that he would get no further visas unless he could prove that rumors about his Jewish origin were not true.

Commenting, Macias told the press that while he never took any interest in politics, he saw no reason to deny his Jewish origins, of which he was not ashamed — even if it caused him to suffer.

• After 48 years of publication, Theater Arts magazine has folded up.

• Remember Col. Mickey Marcus of the United States, who became the first General in Israel in 1948 during the country's struggle for independence? His biography will be filmed next spring, with Johnny Wayne starring. Title will be: Cast A Giant Shadow. Scenes will include New York, Washington, Israel, France.

• Toronto actor Lloyd Bochner plans to star in a Hollywood feature.

A full-length picture, Kaddish, inspired by Allen Ginsberg's poem of the same name, will be made by film director Robert Frank who, up to now, has confined himself to shorts.

• Elaine May, female partner of Nichols and May, is writing an original version of the children's tale, Rumpelstiltskin. Her daughter will appear in it.

•One of the reasons for the popularity of What Makes Sammy Run? is Steve Lawrence who already had earned his fame as a night club entertainer and recording star.

• Though Beatles' manager Brian Epstein denies it, rumors are that he may sell out part, if not all, of his pop interests for a profit.

• English thrush, 16-year-old Helen Shapiro, faces a hectic summer. She's scheduled to appear in Spain, France, Ireland, Holland, Lebanon and Tunisia.

• Toronto resident, Ruth Lowe, who wrote years ago I'll Never Smile Again, has another hit: Take Your Sins To The River. She composed this in collaboration with her son, Tommie Lowe Sandler.

• Shoshana Shoshan, popular Israeli singer, and her husband-manager, Andy Delmar, has filed suit in New York against Eddie Elkort Enterprises and Quantos Empire Airways Ltd. because she says she was stranded in Australia while on tour booked by Elkort, according to Variety.

• According to a recent release, Laurence Harvey will star in the British production of Camelot this summer.

• Toronto's Ed Mirvish, business tycoon who is running the Royal Alexandra, took over direct control of the theater because he was convinced that bookings of good shows were being lost "Because it's my money, I might be more willing to make a concession than an employee would.... I intend to operate the Royal Alex for five years. If I can't make a go of it by then, I'll turn it over to the city."

Mirvish intends to get the most popular shows. He'll guarantee and even invest if necessary. He'll succeed because he never deviates from what he starts out to do.

• Louis Nizer, theatrical lawyer and well known for his best seller, My Life In Court, is comtemplating U S. politics. He intends to run for Senate from New York on the Democratic ticket.

• The American Council for Judaism has made a film, Return No More, perhaps the first ever made by Jews who oppose Zionism.

• Benny Goodman's daughter Rachel is a student at Boston University and has time for radio too.

• Toronto's Rita Greene, former wife of actor Lorne Greene of Bonanza series, now is a rebbetzin. She was married last Sunday to Rabbi Maurice Eisendrath, president of the Union of American Congregations, a Reform body.

• Tel Aviv these days is humming with movie productions. The end of 1964 may bear fruit by at least half-a-dozen films.

• World Premiere of "Abraham and Isaac", a new work by Igor Stravinsky, will be featured as part of the Fourth Israel Drama and Music Festival, July 8-Aug. 31. The composer-conductor refused a fee, dedicating the score "to the Jewish People". The money ($15,000) will help the archeological work in the ancient city of Mezzada which overlooks the Dead Sea, in the south of Israel.

• Collectors Guild and House of Menuah are in trouble over their necks. It seems they have taken discs by the late Cantor Josef "Yossele" Rosenblatt, for which Greater Recording Company claims the rights for RCA. Suit is for $100,000.

Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer plans to celebrate its 40th anniversary as a motion picture industry in September. Metro films will be seen in 40,000 cities throughout the world and the Story of MGM will be made available.

• There's a small synagogue in Hollywood that once was the scene of some of the hottest card games. The Jewish place of worship is part of what once was the Hollywood Athletic Club. Today it is the University of Judaism with 1400 students.

• Toronto artist Sol Zeifman's exhibit of four oil pointings and two silk screen variations on a Greek motif, Printed on fabric, can be seen this month at the Wychwood Branch of the Toronto Public Library.

FUNNY THING... SILLY

by BARBARA I. PEARL

Deliberately I waited for practically the last showing of A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum, which had its finis at the O'Keefe Center last week. After duly noting criticisms pro and con, I draw my own conclusions: silly.

Of course, there are a couple of good belly laughs. Just looking at Jerry Lester dispels all doldrums. And Arnold Stang? It doesn't matter what he says or does. One glance at that question mark of a face, listening to that gritty voice made famous through the medium of television, can call for a strait jacket. Then there's the forever young Edward Everett Horton. He doesn't do much, except run around the stage two or three times. But that, coupled with what he looks like in a toga, is just what the doctor ordered.

Nor does one forget the procurer who keeps his girls in tow. And midst them we have our young virgin, ever eager but unobtainable.

With such a set-up one can imagine the quips: the virgin was waiting – that's what they do best; never fall in love in a total eclipse; if you're happy as your mother and I, my heart bleeds for you.

Funny in the parlor. But for O'Keefe — not enough substance.

HUMAN RELATIONS

The Right to Privacy

DR. ROSE N. FRANZBLAU

QUESTION: I have just recently obtained an apartment for my sister in my building, which she was most anxious to get. I have no objection to her having the keys to my apartment, but I asked her to please ring before she opens the door herself. I have two teenage children who are very upset by this invasion of their privacy. I feel they are justified.

When I asked my sister to ring first, she became highly insulted and said I didn't trust her. This is not so. I merely feel one's home is one's castle and privacy should be respected. On occasion she would open the door with her husband and just be inside.

Now she is angry and hasn't come up to my home for a week. My dad, who lives with me, is quite upset as we all are.

ANSWER: There is no question that you are right in insisting that your sister announce her arrival by ringing the bell.

Such unannounced entry can not only be an intrusion and a violation of a youngster's privacy, but it can also be an upsetting experience, when a child is absorbed in her work, to hear unexpected movements and noises within the house. Not only youngsters, but adults too, have this type of reaction. However, as you surely realize, there is much more to this situation than appears on the surface.

When your father came to live with you, you felt the privacy of your family life was already invaded. Perhaps when you got the desired apartment for your sister, you hoped that your wish for greater cooperation and help from her with your father would also be realized. You did not anticipate that giving her the keys to your home would add to your burdens and be a further intrusion on your family life.

This is probably the implicit message to which your sister is reacting, more than to your request that she announce her coming. It was a way of telling her that she wasn't doing enough. By staying away from your house she says, in effect, that she got the message, doesn't like it, and if that is the way you feel she will do nothing at all.

The person who is hurt most by this dissension is, of course, your father. In all likelihood, he feels responsible for the disagreement and reasons that if he weren't around there would be no friction.

Your feelings about your sister's behavior in this area have existed over the years, and need to be brought out into the open. Such a discussion does not have to be started with accusations against each other, but rather with a statement of some of the difficulties that are the natural result of having your father live with you. You could explain how this has made life harder not only for you but even more for your children and your husband.

Then you can ask your sister for help, specifying when, how and what she can do. Perhaps she can have your father with her for an occasional weekend, a holiday, or some evenings during the week.

It may be that, because your father lives with you, your younger sister sees it not as your home, but as her parents' home where, as a child of the family, she can come and go without prior anouncement. This too must be clarified.

Above all, for her future peace of mind, your sister should make peace with the family. The first step in this direction is to contribute more as a daughter and to be more cooperative as a sister.

TORONTO NAZIS

By L. D. ABRAHAMS

the hatemongering group, including the notorious Social Crediter Neil Carmichael (who, incidentally, phoned CJN about a year ago to hotly deny affiliation with anti-Semitic groups) are disturbed and unstable people, the kind sooner or later bound to fall foul of the law (if they haven't already done so) and thus qualify for arrest.

But for this to happen, for these people to stumble into the arms of the law, the law has to be interested in catching them. The question is: How interested is the law in hounding the haters? In order to research the article that has only just appeared, Sypnowich associated with the hatemongers as long ago as last March. At that time he was already feeding information to Magistrate Bick. And, according to Meyer Sharzer, of the Canadian Jewish Congress, the CJC had itself already been feeding him more information and for a longer period. Yet absolutely no harassment of the hatemongers by the police appears to have been recorded, or at least made public, to date.

How come? How come Detective Sergeant Kennedy as good as told Sypnowich to lay off his undercover work by telling him that if he (Sypnowich) were present during any conspiracy he too could be arrested and charged? If that is the measure of police concern up till now, it is no wonder that no arrests of hatemongers, even on other than hatemongering charges, have been made.

Perhaps, however, with Justice Minister Guy Favreau's promise, two weeks ago, of RCMP assistance to provincial and metropolitan police forces in hounding the haters, things will begin to change. On the other hand, RCMP assistance has, in fact, been available for a long time. All that Mr. Favreau did was to promise it publicly.

The Sypnowich article, besides opening a new chapter in the sorry tale of hatemongering in Canada, seems also to put police officialdom in a gloomy light on the matter. Whether this is really justified or not remains to be seen. But a tight-lipped attitude doesn't help brighten the picture. The Sypnowich article reveals details of the criminal nature of the hatemongers' way of life, details which, though made public only now by the "Canadian Weekly", must have been known at least to Magistrate Bick, and probably to the whole Police Commission, long ago.

One more question: Why was Sypnowich warned to lay off before he had had a chance to be introduced to "an Irishman named John" who, he was told, was the contact man with a group which had been collecting an arsenal of guns, including machine guns, since 1955? Was it getting too dangerous? If so, have appropriately trained police officers been put on the trail instead?

No answers to these questions were available before CJN's press time for this issue. But they should be forthcoming soon.
